"Did you check the box on the left shelf?" Eliza asked. Evan turned to his left, saw the box, and found the right screws. Luckily there were plenty of them left!

Meanwhile, Elf Ethan was decorating cookies for Santa. He had left the sprinkles on the left side of the counter and the frosting on the right. "I think I need more green frosting," he said. He looked left and right but realized he had used it all. "I'll go get some more from the pantry."

Elf Emily was in charge of wrapping gifts. She had left a stack of presents on the left table and rolls of wrapping paper on the right. "I've wrapped so many gifts, I've lost track," she said. "Can someone check if there are more gifts left to wrap? And maybe someone can help me write the gift tags."

Elf Ella was preparing Santa's sleigh. She had left the harnesses on the left side of the stable and was now checking the reins on the right. "Everything has to be perfect for Santa's journey," she said, making sure the sleigh bells were attached just right.

In another part of the workshop, Elf Eric was testing toys to make sure they worked correctly. He had left a batch of dolls on the right table and a pile of teddy bears on the left. "These toys are just right," he said, giving a thumbs-up to Elf Eliza.

Elf Ethan returned with the frosting and started decorating again. He left the pantry door open, so Elf Evan closed it as he walked by. "Thanks, Evan," said Ethan. "I was in such a hurry, I forgot!"

As the day went on, the elves continued their work, moving left and right, making sure every toy was perfect and every gift was wrapped just right. They sang Christmas carols as they worked, spreading cheer and joy throughout the workshop.

Elf Emma was organizing the stockings. She had left the stockings for the reindeer on the right side of the barn and the stockings for Santa on the left. "We can't forget anyone," she said. "Everyone deserves a stocking full of treats!"

That evening, Santa came to check on the progress. "You elves have done a wonderful job," he said.

"Everything looks just right for Christmas Eve!"

The elves cheered and high-fived each other. They knew they had worked hard and everything was ready for Santa's big night. Elf Eliza looked around and said, "We make a great team. Left and right, we've got everything covered!"

Santa smiled and said, "Now, it's time to rest before the big journey. Thank you, my wonderful elves, for all your hard work."

And so, the elves left the workshop and went right to their cozy bunks, dreaming of a magical Christmas and the joy they had helped create for children right around the world.
